ABSTRACT OF DISCLOSURE

A portable computer having a main body, and a display part, which has a screen input, and capable of being opening-rotated and converting-rotated relative to the main body. A position sensor detects a converting rotation position of the display part and a controller manages power supplied to the screen input part of the display part based upon the position sensor detecting that the display part is converting-rotated into a converting rotation zone.